Reasons for comment:

Comments:	I have lived on A227 south street for 35 years and I can honestly say that the idea of another 100 houses being built with the road so dangerous. I have had a car land in my front garden, helped 12 children after the bus crash, where the emergency services could not get through while the children were bleeding everywhere and left one 12 year old little girl with life changing injuries. It doesn't stop there in 2008 the council was considering that the road be classed as a B road. There are so many accidents and two deaths, many people have had cars plough into there house garden and even the petrol station motor bike accidents it's just terrible When these things happen the whole road if shut no body can go nowhere. The air ambulance has been in the fields to attend many casualties. Add to the fact the road is diabolical with pot holes every and Also Hogarth tyre shedder blocking the road between 2-3 times 3 or4 times a week. This is a through road from A2-M20-M26 it's awful now, goodness knows what will happen if more cars are coming into the road. Not to mention that the road has traffic lights on it every day and in some cases three set on stretch. And what about the Doctors surgery no one get an appointment now let along if you add all these extra houses with at the very least 200 extra people. And where are the children going, there isn't any places I think you should think about these things when looking at the application I strongly object to this application
