Reasons for comment:
Comments:	The planning application does not bear any resemblance to what has been built. The ground floor rear extension has been divided into two rooms, both having their own back door into the garden which points to it being a multi-occupancy house. No mention of this in the application. [REDACTED] From what we saw the whole project has been done cheaply and many corners have been cut which in our opinion, and of many others, will cause problems in the future. The fact that this monstrosity was put up so quickly and cheaply BEFORE the application was put in is a joke and we trust that a building inspector will be going round to check it over. We don't know what the law is regarding HMO's but surely this should have been mentioned in the application.

Kind regards
