Reasons for comment:
Comments:	The planned application of development of 100 houses is just obviously so wrong, not only is it right next to ancient woodland, full of wildlife, which in itself should be totally protected, they should preserved this at all costs, it's proximity to the A227 is also totally wrong as ANYONE who lives here or travels along it knows... it has houses bordering close to the road in many places, it's already quite a dangerous road, with many bends and blind spots (but stupid people still do try to overtake!) my objection is not only for Blackthorn but the other proposed 'planned' developments, the road is not designed to take the amount of traffic that would potentially be driving through it, approx 3000 extra cars that's without the volume of traffic that will increase when the lower Thames crossing is up and running, extra cars will gridlock the 'village' I am definitely against this proposal.

Kind regards
