

I strongly object to the proposed Glamping site for the following reasons

1 I feel it would have a very adverse affect on the adjoining woodland which is home to a great amount of wildlife that includes Goldcrests and Nightingales (I know of nowhere else locally where these thrive)

2 It could hardly be described as a peaceful site. If people want a relaxing holiday they won't want to be wakened to the clanking of skip lorries at 7am and indeed a procession of them all day, plus an ever increasing number of other lorries to and from the Nuralite development. That's if they've been able to get any sleep with the noise that comes from the railway at Hoo junction some nights

3 The lane for access is very narrow and not ideal for the inevitable increase in traffic, the junction with Lower Higham Rd (that has a ridiculously high 50mph speed limit) is not good especially for people that are not familiar with it, there has been two bad accidents there in the last few weeks and other near misses I have witnessed as I live opposite

4 A similar application for a campsite on a smaller field on the west side of Church Lane was decided against several years ago
