Reasons for comment:
Comments:	As a long-term customer of the Golden Lion, or the Lion, as it is now called, I am excited for the opportunity for an upgrade to the eating and drinking in the area. I play for the local cricket team and so did my father before me. The Cock Inn just down the road has always been a rural country pub focusing on real ale with no children or food. It make sense to me that there should also be a family-friendly and food-friendly pub as well in the village, that way there's something for everyone here in Luddesdown. With the Silverhand Estate growing wine in the area, having a high-end food offering alongside the English wine is a good opportunity to bring more money and jobs into the local area, as English wine is the fastest growing rural industry in the country at this point in time.

Kind regards
