Reasons for comment:
Comments:	Longfield road is already extremely congested and dangerous at school pick up times and during the day when children are being picked up at dropped off at the nursery and the Helen Allison school. The Helen Allison school is for autistic children who will be troubled by the building work and the noise and disruption. I also do not think that we can afford to lose more farmland and that more of the derelict sites in Gravesend and surrounding areas need to be redeveloped before we look at building on farmland. This should be a last resort, not the first and just seems that developers are being greedy as presumably costs less to build on the farmland. Lastly, people drive far too fast on Longfield road and more traffic will just be dangerous and the village does not have the infrastructure to cope.

Kind regards
