Reasons for comment:

Comments:	This structure has been built extremely close to [REDACTED] boundary and it so overbearing - it runs alongside approximately half the length of the garden. It is taller than the fence already there so is all we can see along the right side of the garden. It had been erected without planning permission and we only now get to object after it has been built! Will be used as accommodation as part of the house now that it has a toilet and shower added ? Our privacy is affected but as already been built without permission, will the planning permission be granted retrospectively ? If so it sets a precedence for others to build whatever they like without obtaining permission first!
