Reasons for comment:

Comments:	This is getting ridiculous. The amount of planning applications being put forward recently for the area of Meopham is in the region of 1400. This would mean an increase in population of around 5000-6000 people and an increase of probably up to 3000 extra cars on the road. The infrastructure in this area cannot cope now let alone with the extra houses and cars and people and children. The A227 is often very blocked particularly during rush hour and there are a large number of schools along the A227 and longfield road which would mean even worse congestion at certain times of the day. There is a shortage of doctors surgeries in the area. The hospital cannot cope now. I am glad I don't have to drive to work anymore using the A227 and A2 London bound. Nightmare. And if these houses are built on our green belt farming land which the government did not want to happen it would mean the loss of farming land which produces food for people and animals. And the farmers who use the land for their livelihood. I know the council is under pressure from the government to build a certain number of new homes but this seems to be well above the national average and you are talking about an over populated area of the country. Think again how you are destroying the countryside and the loss of our natural beauty spots.
