Reasons for comment:

Comments:	I object this planning application as I think it is not sensible or responsible to build new homes on farmland. There are many areas within Gravesend centre that should be built on first rather than building on farmland. Meopham is a rural place and does not have the infrastructure for that many people. But more importantly we are in a climate crisis, the science is clear on that, and we know food distribution will be a key challenge for countries around the world as global crops yields fail. The UK will be one of the safer places to live and to grow food and we should therefore not be building on farmland land which will be crucial for our food security in the future. The UK is also one for the most nature depleted counties in the world and building on farm land before other areas have been exhausted such as the brown belt abandoned areas around the centre of Gravesend would not help with this issue. I do agree that homes need to be built but it should be done first and foremost on land that isn't ripe with biodiversity and British nature.
