Reasons for comment:
Comments:	I strongly object to such a large housing development on farm land. Good arable land that is needed more than ever to feed our nation. Unfortunately arable land once disappeared it will never be returned. Farm land is being taken over by solar panels and wind farms and now houses that are not even planned to have solar panels included on their roofs ! Utter madness. There are plenty of brown land sites in Gravesham - the old hospital which has been abandoned for years, the hotel adjacent to the A2 also abandoned on large sites these are just two examples that come to mind. There are plenty of new tower blocks and even more still being built in Gravesend town - where are all these people supposed to go for health, education, enjoyment, green spaces etc and what about the roads and infrastructure and all the noise and pollution including light pollution that will destroy Meopham's beautiful wild life. The land planned to be built is on a belt of green land dividing two villages they therefore will be joined as together providing one large mass of houses with no boundaries so much for individual villages just a mass of buildings with no end.

Kind regards
