Reasons for comment:
Comments:	I can only assume that objections will be deflected with the standard people need some where to live comment. The question everyone one is missing is where is nature going to live in all its diverse environments and species. Kent once the garden of England is becoming a county of overpopulated areas without the infrastructure to support the development or residents. Once we have eliminated all of our habitat for wildlife there is no going back. Our current towns have empty houses waiting redevelopment and ample opportunity for development without deverstating the natural environment.

Kind regards
