Incidental to the enjoyment of the Dwellinghouse

It is important to establish whether the outbuilding is considered to be incidental to the enjoyment of the dwellinghouse. An example of non-incidental use would be for the purposes of primary living accommodation such as a bathroom, living room, bedroom or kitchen.

The agent has confirmed the outbuilding would be used as a summer house with access to the rear alley. In addition, the outbuilding is subordinate to the existing dwellinghouse. As such, the outbuilding is considered to be incidental to the enjoyment of the dwellinghouse.

Conclusion

The proposed development complies with Schedule 2, Part 1, Classes A and E of THE TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING (GENERAL PERMITTED DEVELOPMENT) (ENGLAND) ORDER 2015, AS AMENDED, and the LAWFUL DEVELOPMENT CERTIFICATE is GRANTED.
