Reasons for comment:
Comments:	The extra traffic to the drove way would be considerable,at least two cars per household plus visitors would have a great effect on the drove way that is already quite busy and cars double parked.schools would also have to try and accept the extra children.our doctors are struggling at the moment as my mother and myself are users and all the extra people would put a very heavy strain on our already struggling doctors.i would have thought that it would not be a good idea to develop housing,pavement and roads over a prime level piece of ground which catches a lot of ground water.we are lucky to have loads of wild life and plants which i thought we was protected from being a greenbelt area.

Kind regards
