Reasons for comment:

Comments:	This application cannot be approved if the rule of law is to mean anything. Not only has it previously been refused, but the illegal manner in which the caravans were moved in destroying trees along their path to gain access is in itself a crime. The site is protected by a legally binding injunction from 2009. This ruling prohibits residential use indefinitely and it was served for a clear purpose. To weakly ignore this injunction simply to avoid confrontation makes a mockery of our legal system, creating one rule for one and another for the rest of us. Do the right thing. Protect our countryside, our rights and our laws. The flood gates will open if the council do not enforce the injunction that has already been placed in that land.
