Reasons for comment:

Comments:	I strongly object to this new development. The existing framework of transport, roads and doctors within the local area cannot cope with the population as it stands. The A227 is a major route between the A2/M2 and the M20/M25/M26, and regularly is affected by issues on the motorways. The A227 has recently been closed due to water leaks, which caused major problems in the area. The lane where the residents would be joining the A227 is not suitable for that many new houses. We badly need additional doctors as it is very difficult to get an appointment at the moment. Similarly there have been issues at local hospitals. I understand new houses are required, particularly for 1st time buyers, but I really don't think this is the right place for them. There must be plenty of brownfield sites in Gravesend, with much better transport links, that would be more suitable, instead of building on the green belt.
