Reasons for comment:
Comments:	My son attends Helen Allison which is next to the proposed site of one of the plans. This is a specialist school for autistic children and one of the reasons it works so well and is so successful is because it is a quiet haven for these children. It doesn't need to be dwarfed by a housing development which will cause noise, disruption and make the surrounding area so much busier. Things like these schools are built in quiet countryside settings for a reason and that needs to be respected. I also cannot imagine the influx of traffic to a small area, it is hard enough to drop my son to school as it is (I have to drive him out of area) and there is not enough parking for this in a small village space. In addition every day I see that pretty field and all of the wildlife that calls it home and I love having that touch of nature. If we continue to build on every patch of green land there will be none left. Nature needs a home.

Kind regards
