Reasons for comment:

Comments: I've known the two of them for many many years, they've tried ever so hardcover the last twenty or thirty years to make the pub work, even putting in open mic nights that nobody turned up to. This was at considerable cost to themselves in many cases. They provided food and kept decent ales. Alas, the lack of support for the pub at the best of times made it impossible to carry on and yet they did for many years and were popular with those of us who did visit. They should be allowed to have this application supported as they worked tirelessly to keep it open which was often a thankless task. There are many people in Harvel who want the pub to remain open and yet hardly utiliser the facilities and they present no viable business case.

Kind regards
