Reasons for comment:
Comments:	Pressure on our rural roads is already severe, especially when the A227 is closed. The A227 is heavily used as a cut-through by lorries and other traffic coming from the A2 and M20, and any additional strain only worsens congestion and safety concerns. We're also facing the loss of rural communities that have been part of our landscape for hundreds of years. The steady disappearance of farmland is deeply worrying for the country. If we continue losing farms at this pace, how would we feed the nation in a crisis or wartime situation? Local services are already stretched. Schools and doctors' surgeries are under pressure, and parking is a persistent issue around village shops and schools such as Meopham Junior and Infant School. Any further development risks overwhelming the limited infrastructure we rely on daily.

Kind regards
