Reasons for comment:

Comments:	Silverhand Eatates have again filed an assumptive application, this time they seem to believe the "Temporary Planning Permission" for the many tanks and the heavy plant based at their factory on Luddesdown Road will become permanent planning permission when the limited licence expires. Should GBC choose to protect the Green Belt and the AoONB and refuse to extent their temporary permission, the new car park will no longer be necessary as the multitude of extra vehicles they intend to put on Cuxton, Upper Bush & Luddesdown's lanes would be commuting to their new more urban factory leaving plenty of space for the field workers cars. The roads have become considerably more dangerous in the last couple of years, I suggest you ask to see their accident book Unlicensed tractor driver crashing into a sports car HGV hitting house Road signs x 3 being destroyed Mini digger being towed crashing
