Reasons for comment:
Comments:	For all the same reasons the application was refused and a High Court Injunction obtained previously at the same site. It is a rural green belt area, the single track road is totally unsuited to the amount of traffic it will generate. This has already been demonstrated by the wanton destruction to the mature trees and hedgerow during the illegal siting of the most recent mobile home. There is no public transport so the site is in an "unsustainable" location according to planning regulations, the only means of getting anywhere is by motor vehicle. There will be absolutely zero integration of the travellers into the local community as they have already demonstrated by the illegal construction of high walls and fences around the site. They have also cleared acres of mature woodland with no redress. It is regrettable that having spent a great deal of money obtaining a High Court Injunction the Council then gave permission for a "Touring caravan" to be parked there for a set period, and then did nothing to enforce it's removal when it was no longer needed for "security". The fact that the touring caravan turned into a small bungalow did not come as a surprise to anyone as far as I know.

Kind regards
