Comments:	As usual no thought is really put into these applications. You cant just build on land with real consideration for the local area. What provision is there for addition school places, and doctors, etc. What about utilities etc. Building in small villages doesn't make sense. The A227 is a major cut through between the M20 and the A2. Its not designed to take the traffic especially HOWS that it does. 100 house will mean at least another 100 cars, because there's no decent public transport, so that's against net zero. Farm land is green belt, not grey belt as described by some developers and should be the last resort for houses. Make developers use brownfield sites and refurb old buildings. I guess there's less marketing attraction and profit. Also just remember when making your decision that we need farmland to produce food. What's going to happen when there's no farmland left? We will have import food. You think the energy crisis was bad, just think what will happen when food prices increase exponentially. Be brave, stop worrying about lost council tax and Government pressure. Just say no
Kind regards
