Reasons for comment:
Comments:	Developers Have fallen like vultures on the prospect of removing the constraint of building on the green belt. This application is one of four submitted recently. At present there are 4349 people in the proposed area. If 1354 dwellings were built here, using the government figure of 2.38 person per household this would give us 3223 more people. This is madness. This is a 75% increase in people in such a small area. The council is using the governments inflated targets to justify the release of huge swathes of green belt land for development. This is shortsighted in the extreme. Surely a growth in population justifies the preservation of green belt land for the health and ability to grow food in the future.

Kind regards
