| Comments:            | This area is beautiful. I regularly walk here and the feel of being in the countryside is good for peoples mental health. As I understand it this piece of land sits in the green belt. If it goes, it will be gone forever and future generations will not be able to enjoy this unique countryside. Is it really true that there are not more appropriate sites for all these houses? The area will be unrecognisable from the designation of 'an area of outstanding natural beauty'. Is there really the infrastructure to accommodate all these houses? The quality of residents lives will be diminished by this over development. The traffic passing through these lanes will disturb the ambience of the area forever. This is a buffer between rural and urban. Please think again. |

Kind regards
