Reasons for comment:
Comments:	An already dangerous small country lane cannot take an additional 300+ cars using it without serious accidents causing problems for our already overstretched emergency services. Losing more farmland leading to no replacement for future generations whose only option will be higher prices and importing produce. As with the other proposed areas this will lead to loss of our green belt land which cannot be replaced. 1440 additional cars using the A227 which is already over congested and dangerous. The quiet narrow lanes off of the A227 hold no safe route for the hgv, emergency vehicles and the road traffic that will have no escape from the gridlock the A227 will become on a daily basis. The lower Thames crossing will add to this traffic congestion concentrate becomes more once construction increases and once it is active. Train journeys into London are already overstretched and the bus service offers no viable solution to try to reduce road traffic. Overstretch local doctors and schools will not cope.

Kind regards
