Reasons for comment:

Comments:	I totally object to this on the grounds of plain old common sense. This should actually be treated as a criminal act, not planning permission. This [REDACTED] has intimidated lawful garage owners of many years standing. He bought 4 garages, HE DOES NOT OWN THE LAND. He has no right at all to block access to ANY of the 22 garages. He does not have the right to restrict access to [REDACTED] garage or [REDACTED]. He has decided that nobody uses the garages, so he [REDACTED]. I thought he was [REDACTED] when he came [REDACTED] but imaging my surprise when you have entertained a [REDACTED] and you are allowing a [REDACTED] to try to apply for permission for land that he does not own. This is not his land. He does not own this land. He does not speak for me or the various owners of the 22 garages. He has caused great suffering and personal distress to the relatives of a garage [REDACTED] [REDACTED] I personally know several garage owners who have been cause great stress and suffering buy this [REDACTED] He is seeking to rent out his containers as a business for profit, while destroying access to existing garages lawfully owned. You should not consider any planning permission and you should adopt an enforcement role and order the immediate removal of this illegally places containers. I will stand by my comments and I am willing to attend Court with this matter.
