Reasons for comment:

Comments:	I object to this extension - primarily the side ground floor extension - because it would take away 1/2 parking spaces for cars. Fairview drive is a no through road and most people have taken away their front garden in order to park family cars. Most families will have 3/4 cars if children are of driving age. [REDACTED] Fairview has 5/6 cars but all parked on their driveway. This extension does exactly the opposite and will reduce the ability to park cars off road. Their 2 children will soon be at an age where they may want to buy cars too and the road is always busy with visitors cars especially at weekends. Currently when visitors park opposite my house and don't park up the kerb, it makes it extremely difficult to reverse onto my driveway. In addition to this, although wouldn't directly affect me, [REDACTED] would struggle to park their car on their driveway (which is adjacent to no 8's driveway) and actually be able to open their car door to get out. With this in mind, would that mean another car parked in the road, potentially? Lastly, if the aim of the extra space downstairs is to provide another bedroom for relative, would that mean another car for the household? For the above reasons I object.
